Have you ever heard of the interesting sentences like "Every dog has its day", "They live a cat-and-dog life"? Do you know what they mean in English? In fact, there are a lot of expressions about dogs, and there are often some interesting stories behind them. Take "It rains cats and dogs" for example. It doesn't mean cats and dogs fall down from the sky. People believe its story can go back to England of the 17th century. During those times, there were always many dead cats and dogs around in the water after heavy rain. That's why "It rains cats and dogs" means "it rains hard." There is another story about this expression. In old times, people believed that the bad spirits of cats and dogs could bring lots of rain. Whether you believe it or not, the expressions really make languages more interesting.

After the news about the big Plastic Island in the Pacific Ocean, people and scientists began to care more about how greatly plastic products could hurt our earth. A new kind of plastic, "biodegradable" plastic, thus came along. But it's not the panacea. While most people think anything biodegradable turn into nothing in the end, it's still there, just in a different form, and, in fact, a more dangerous one.

Everything coming from us will always find its way back to ourselves, one way or another. When something gets broken down into pieces as small as nanometer, it can pass straight through the wall of a cell. Once these biodegradable plastics get thrown into the sea, they will soon come back in a small form into our body and hurt our health.

We usually have the habit of seeing only problems right in front of our eyes, and we always forget those imminent consequences. Mother Earth will die, and so will all the living things on it. This is never a problem far away, but one that is getting closer and worse every day. So from now on, let's try our best to stop using plastics, biodegradable or not.

Leading a life without plastics helps not only ourselves but our single planet.

* thus:因此 panacea:萬靈丹 nanometer:奈米 cell:細胞 consequences:嚴重後果

29. What does the word "biodegradable" mean in the reading?

(A) Able to be used and then thrown away.

(B) Able to get broken down into small parts.

(C) Able to turn into other things, like clothes.

(D) Able to be used over and over again.

30. What can we know from the reading?

(A) Most people don't know that biodegradable plastics are even worse for their health.

(B) The news about the Plastic Island never made people change their living habits.

(C) Using biodegradable plastics is the best way to solve the serious problem.

(D) The author(作者) of the reading agree on the use of biodegradable plastics to save our earth.

31. Kenny, a junior high student, has made some plans for his two-month summer vacation. This long break will start on July 1st. Which is the most imminent for him?

(A) Prepare for the violin contest at the end of July.

(B) Make a plan of traveling to Japan before the vacation starts.

(C) Help primary school students in the math camp in the first week of August.

(D) Finish the science report and hand it in right after the new semester(學期) starts.

About three thousand years ago, ancient Egyptians found that honey seems to contain some special ingredients that can treat coughs or skin wounds.

Today, many doctors say that people with coughs should take some honey instead of seeing a doctor. To fight with some diseases, like coughs, honey usually works better than most types of antibiotic.

In fact, people with coughs usually get better on their own in a few weeks. Many of us go to a doctor if we have coughs, however, doctors say this may be a waste of time. Antibiotics do little to make coughs go away, and we use antibiotics too much to make they are getting weaker against viruses. This is creating dangerous super viruses. Honey can help to soothe a sore throat. Although taking honey is a traditional remedy, it really does well on coughs. Honey is also good for children - they love honey but don't like medicine or doctors.

* ancient Egyptian:古埃及人 contain:包含 ingredient:成份 wood:傷口 treat:治療 disease:疾病 instead:替代 create:創造 soothe:舒緩 traditioal remedy:傳統療法

- (A) Antibiotics will create a super virus in human bodies to protect(保護) people.
(B) Doctors can always use antibiotics to help people fight with super viruses.
(C) Antibiotics will make humen become super viruses.
(D) Too much antibiotics will make people weaker to fight with viruses.

34. What is the main idea of the article?

- (A) Many of us go to see a doctor if we have coughs.
(B) Children do not like visiting a doctor.
(C) A cup of honey a day keeps doctor away.
(D) Doctors suggest(建議) people with coughs to drink or eat honey instead of going to the hospital.
