CITY NEWS

NOV. 25th, 2018

The election finished yesterday, and Bella Wu is surely going to be the new mayor of South Visa.

Bella Wu started low in the poll ratings because most people in South Visa knew nothing about her. Though Nick Chen's ratings started to fall a little each month from the middle of the year, he still didn't see Bella as a rival. In fact, he always believed he would easily win the election until a month ago when Bella's ratings became clearly higher than his.

Bella is the first woman to take the seat successfully. Some reporters say Bella won because she visited people in South Visa door to door, and she listened to the voice of people; some people believe it is because Bella has clear plans about how to bring money to the old city; others think many young people in South Visa hoped for change, so they finally came out to vote, and most of them voted for Bella Wu. Although some people are worried about whether the daughter of a factory worker can lead them to a bright future, many in South Visa are celebrating the win and wishing for a big change in the city.

(B)  There aren't many jobs in South Visa, and young people are leaving the city. I believe the new mayor will soon do something different for South Visa and make it rich again.

(C)  Maybe both Bella and Nick know what to do to make South Visa a better city. I once had hope, but now I'm not sure. I've been thinking about leaving the city with my family, but maybe I'll change my mind.

(D)  Both Bella and Nick are good. However, the city doesn't have time to wait a fresh person to learn about how to run. We need someone with more experiences to be our mayor.
