Before your trip to Sydney, always ask one question—what's the weather like there? There's one tip for you to keep in mind. Because Sydney is in the southern hemisphere, the seasons are the opposite of the north. Here's a guide to help you plan your trip.

The summer months in Sydney start about in December. It is sunny and warm with water temperature at about 21-26°C. It is a perfect time to enjoy Sydney's beaches and water sports activities. Then it's autumn, when it could be a little cool at night with the temperature below 15°C. Be sure to bring a jacket when you go for a walk along the beach. June to August are the coldest months in Sydney. However, it usually rains but seldom snows in winter. Just because the days are shorter doesn't mean there is less fun. At the Light Show, the biggest event in winter, you can watch the light dances between the sky and Sydney Opera House at night! When it's spring, days are warmer and dryer, getting people ready for the summer fun again.
