Pizza Problems Solved with Math

Math and Italian food are not two things you'd expect to have much of a relationship. Lately, however, one Twitter user proved that good math can save you money at a pizza restaurant. Twitter user @cretiredroy posted about his pizza problem, and his post has almost 200,000 likes.

In his post, the man said he ordered a 9-inch pizza at a restaurant. He was given two 5-inch pizzas instead because the larger pizzas were unavailable. The waiter said that the man was getting an extra inch for free. The man disagreed, citing a mathematical formula as evidence. In the end, the man proved that two 5-inch pizzas are much smaller than one 9-inch pizza. In fact, even three 5-inch pizzas would be less. But how can this be true?

@cretiredroy used a simple formula to calculate the total area of a circle: πr^2 . In this formula, " π " is equal to 3.1415926, and "r" is the radius of the circle. Using this method, he showed that one 9-inch pizza has an area of 63.62 square inches. One 5-inch pizza just has an area of 19.63 square inches.

There was a happy ending for @cretiredroy though, when the restaurant owner finally gave him four 5-inch pizzas. He encourages his followers to learn from his example and "take math seriously."

39. () Why was Twitter user @cretiredroy unable to get a 9-inch pizza?
 (A) The restaurant didn't sell 9-inch pizzas.
 (B) The waiter wrote down the order incorrectly.
 (C) The waiter forgot to give him the pizza.
 (D) The restaurant didn't have enough 9-inch pizzas.
40. () How many 5-inch pizzas would be needed for the customer to have more food than one 9-inch pizza? (A) Three 5-inch pizzas. (B) Four 5-inch pizzas. (C) Five 5-inch pizzas. (D) Six 5-inch pizzas.
