Are you always tired no matter how much sleep you get ? If so, it's possible that you're lacking B vitamins. P.4
These include B1, B2, B3, B5, B6, B7, B8, B9, and B12.

Although each one does something different, the two most important things that B vitamins do are turn food into energy and make red blood cells for us. That's why if you don't get enough of all eight B vitamins, you can get sick, lose your hair, or experience pain.

More people than you think get ill because they're in need of B vitamins. Vegans, people who only eat vegetables, not animals or food that comes from them, may feel tired and be in poor health because they lack B12. This is because B12, which we all need, is only found in meat. Pregnant women also need to be careful. They need more B9 than other people as it's very important for babies.

So where can you get B vitamins ? There are supplements that you can take, but the best way is to eat different kinds of healthy foods. Green vegetables, brown bread, meat, fish, cheese, milk, and eggs are rich in different B vitamins. A fish-and-egg sandwich, for example, has more than half of the B2, B3, B4, B6, and B12 that we need in a day.
