Amy: Hi, Ted, I heard you had a good time with Kitty at Happy Park last Sunday.

Ted: Yes. Why didn't you come with us? We got there by bus in only twenty minutes.

Amy: I know, but it's always full of people on weekends. Also, I just went there with my cousins last month. Did you try the Surprising Seat there? It's very popular, so people always need to wait for over one hour to get a ride.

Ted: You mean those flower-like umbrellas?

Amy: Yes. I enjoyed riding on the Surprising Seat and looking over the city. It was so exciting.

Ted: Eh.. It flies too high in the sky. I don't think it's fun to ride in the air. I feel like I could fall down anytime. I liked taking the Mini Train to get around the park.

Amy: Maybe you will like it more at night. It's wonderful to see the beautiful lights in the sky.

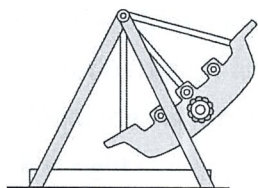

Ted: Well... I don't like high places.

Amy: Oh, I see. That's too bad.

The Post Office at the End of the World

There's a very little island off the coast of the Antarctic Peninsula. It's home to a group of gentoo penguins. Thousands of them gather there to find mates, build nests, and raise their families. The island is also home to Port Lockroy. It was once an old British base. Now, it's a historic site with a museum, gift shop, and post office. Port Lockroy is also called the Penguin Post Office. It's Antarctica's most popular place for cruise ship visitors. It gets around 16,000 of them every year. A team of four people run the Penguin Post from November to March. That's summer in Antarctica. Also, the gentoo penguins get together at that time. The team counts the penguins and gathers information about them. In addition, they welcome the visitors to Port Lockroy. Then, they process around 80,000 cards from the visitors. The team members don't have it easy. They share one bedroom, and there's no heat, running water, or Internet. Even though life there is hard, the team loves their job at the Penguin Post Office.
